PREFACE

The purpose of this book is to present to the Hosmer family certain information about the ancestors and descendants of James Hosmer which is now to be found only in scattered records. It is not the work of an expert genealogist. It does not lay claim to literary merit or to any large amount of original work. Begun originally as a record of one small branch of the family, it has grown to include the entire "Concord Family." The work of collecting and arranging the data has been done amid the rush of other business and cannot therefore be as accurate as though the author had devoted his entire time to it for a long period, as is quite necessary for a thorough piece of genealogical work. It cannot pretend to be complete, but it is hoped that it is reasonably accurate as far as it goes.

There are two reasons for publishing the book in the present incomplete form instead of waiting until it is more fully developed. First, postponement is always risky; many manuscripts have been prepared but not printed, and later these valuable collections have been lost or have been placed where they are of use to but few. A book that is published, even if decidedly imperfect, is of greater use than a pile of manuscript. Second, information is in some instances difficult to obtain, especially where those who are in a position to furnish it do not realize just what is needed and how important it is to send it promptly. When the whole work is before them the requirements will be better understood, and the needful data are more likely to be forthcoming.

No attempt has been made to give the personal history of any members of the family except a small number whose achievements stand out prominently. The residence, occupation, and military service have been stated for each person for whom they are known. If there is uneven treatment of such notices, it is due not to favoritism but to a lack of knowledge of the facts.

To give credit to all who have furnished information and assisted in the preparation of this genealogy would require the printing of hundreds of names. A few, however, should be especially mentioned. The author has had access to the collections of George A. Gardner (1977), Charles M. Hosmer (1549), Henry J. Hosmer (1138), and George W. Hosmer (606) (the last two loaned by Professor Ralph S. Hosmer (2030)), and a manuscript by George Lawrence Hosmer (1001), loaned by Mr. John A. Hosmer (1825). Mr. John G. Hosmer (2228) furnished the entire list of descendants of Nathaniel Hosmer (183). Records of the descendants of Josiah Hosmer (227) were taken from Hubbard's genealogy of that branch. Several well-known genealogies (Potter's "Concord Families," the White and Wood genealogies, and others) and many town histories have been searched for Hosmer records.

The numbering system employed here is similar to that used in many genealogies. The number at the left of a person's name is the one assigned to that person the first time the name appears, and is used to identify him all through the book. When the name is repeated, this same number is given in parentheses after the name. The numbers to the right of the names of children refer to the later paragraphs in which further information will be found. If the person in question had no children, the information about him will be found under his name and there will be no reference to a later paragraph. Following the name of each head of a family is his line of descent, the superior numbers indicating the generation, James[1] being the first in all cases.

It is the author's intention to revise and correct this book if sufficient data can be obtained. In order to do this he should have names in full, not initials; exact dates if possible; notices of errors (serious errors, such as confusing two persons of the same name, or minor errors of date, spelling, etc.); information about families that have moved away and been lost sight of; families that have not as yet been traced back to the founder of this branch of the family. All persons interested are requested to send such information to the author.

HOSMER GENEALOGY

The family of Hosmers whose history is recorded in the following pages is that founded by James Hosmer of Hawkhurst, County of Kent, England, who came to America in 1635 and settled in Concord, Mass. Of the English genealogy of the Hosmer family only so much is given as would furnish a background for the story of the Hosmers in America. The genealogy of the English Hosmers would make a book in itself and would require a large amount of genealogical research in England. The Hartford family of Hosmers has not been included in this book, chiefly on account of the magnitude of the undertaking, but partly because of a lack of personal knowledge of the family. The genealogy of the Hartford branch could be much better written by some member of that family who could start out with an abundant supply of information.

THE FAMILY NAME

Our family name is found in the English and American records spelled in the following ways: Hosmer, Hosmere, Hismer, Hismere, Hosmor, Hosmore, Horsmer, Osmer, Osmar, Osmore, Osmear, Osmire, and Usmer. The name has also been pronounced in various ways, " Ozmore " being quite common, and this pronunciation is still heard today in some localities, such as northwestern Maine, and northern Vermont. From the spelling of the name in the early Boston records we may infer that it was sometimes so pronounced in this locality. Information about the name Osmer will be found in Weekly's " Surnames," page 33, and in Harrison's " Surnames of the United Kingdom," page 54.

OCCURRENCE OF THE NAME IN THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE

In order to trace the family name as far back in history as it is possible to go, we shall present evidence to show that the Hosmers probably came from the Duchy of Sleswick (North Germany), south of Denmark, about the year 547 A. D., and settled along the east coast of England; also that the family name occurs frequently in English records long before the time of William the Conqueror.

We must, however, defend ourselves against any accusation of extravagant claims to ancient family. It is not an unheard-of thing in genealogies to find enthusiastic writers tracing their ancestry back at least to Woden, and claiming relationship to many distinguished persons, when in reality the name itself is the only evidence they have. As a matter of fact it is difficult to trace farther back than about the fifteenth century, and probably only a few families are really able to do this. The following quotations which cite the occurrence of the name in early English history must not, therefore, be taken as proof that the present Hosmer family is descended from the Osmers named therein; they may, however, be taken as giving a hint as to the place from which the family probably came.

The history of the various Saxon invasions here quoted may be more easily followed by referring to the map of the North Sea and the surrounding countries (page 3).

In Sharon Turner's "History of the Anglo-Saxons," Vol. I, Book Second, Chapter V, we read:

In the days of Tacitus and Ptolemy the Angli may have been in Westphalia or Mecklemburg, or elsewhere: but at the era of the Saxon invasion they were resident in the district of Anglen, in the Duchy of Sleswick.

The Duchy of Sleswick extends from the river Leveson, north of Kiel, to the Tobesket, on which stands Colding; but that particular position, which an ancient Saxon author calls Old England, extends from the city of Sleswick to Flemsburg. Sleswick was the capital of Anglen, and distinguished in the eleventh century for its population and wealth.

But those allies of the Saxons with whom the history of Britain is most connected, were the Jutes and Angles. The Jutes inhabited South Jutland, which is now known as the Duchy of Sleswick. The little band first introduced into England by Hengist and Horsa[1] were Jutes.

In Book Third, Chapter IV, of the same work we find:

While Cerdic and his son were conflicting with Arthur and the other British kings and chiefs who opposed them in Hampshire and the adjoining regions, several adventurers from the nation of the Angles in Sleswick arrived on the eastern coast of the island. The chronology of their invasions cannot be more definitely stated than by the date which an old chronicler has affixed to them, and which accords so well with other facts on this subject, that it may be considered as entitled to our attention. Another more ancient has mentioned that many petty chiefs arrived in East Anglia and Mercia in the reign of Cerdic, and fought many battles with the natives; but as they formed no kingdom and were numerous, their names have not been preserved.[2] The year in which the invasions began to occur is placed by the other annalist in 527.[3]

MAP OF NORTH SEA — SCENE OF THE SAXON INVASIONS

Contemporary with these assailants, a body of Saxons planted themselves in Essex, and protected on the south side by the kingdom of the Jutes in Kent, and on the north by the adventurers in East Anglia, they succeeded in founding a little kingdom, about 530,[1] which has little else to attract our notice, than that it gradually stretched itself into Middlesex, and obtained command of London, then but a flourishing town of trade, though destined in a subsequent age to become the metropolis of all the Jute, Saxon and Angli kingdoms of the island.

In this state of the conquest between the British nation and the Saxon invaders, while the Britons, yet masters of all the island, from the Avon to the Cornish promontory on the west, and to the Frith of Forth on the north, were resisting and arresting the progress of the son of Cerdic on the one hand, and the unrecorded adventurers in Norfolk and Suffolk on the other, the most formidable invasion occurred on the coast above the Humber, which the nation had been yet called upon to oppose.

Arrival of Ida in Northumberland

In 547 Ida led to the region between the Tweed and the Frith of Forth, or accompanied, a fleet of forty vessels of warriors, all of the nation of the Angles.[2] Twelve sons were with him.[3] The chieftains associated with him, or who afterwards joined in his enterprise, appointed him king.[4] Ida, like Hengist, Cerdic, and Ella, traced his pedigree to Woden, the great ancestor of the Anglo-Saxon chieftains, as well as those of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

[1] The first king was Erkenwin, who died in 587 (Matt. Westm. p. 200).

[2] Florentii Wigorniensis, (Florence of Worcester). "In Provincia Berniciorum," p. 218; so Nennius calls him the first king of Bernicia, p. 114.

[3] We may record their names as specimens of their family appelations. Adda, Belric, Theoderic, Ethelric, Theodhere, Osmer, from his queens, and Occa, Ailric, Ecca, Oswold, Soger, and Sogether. Most of these are significant words, or combinations of words, in the Saxon language.

[4] So Huntington states, p. 314.

As another instance of a Hosmer in England before the Norman Conquest we quote from the "Memorial of G. W. Hosmer," written by Dr. James K. Hosmer (1151): Referring to an old battlefield of the year 1016, where the Saxon king Edmund Ironsides overcame Canute the Dane, he relates the following:

Says the mediæval chronicler, Florence of Worcester: "The Danes were on the point of yielding, when Edric Streon, a treacherous Earldorman who fought on the side of Canute, struck off the head of a man named Osmer, whose features and hair much resembled those of Edmund; then showing the head to the advancing Saxons, he shouted: 'Flee quickly, ye men of Dorsetshire, Devon, and Wilts; you have lost your leader! Lo, here I hold in my hands the head of your lord, Edmund the King; retreat with all speed.' The English began to flee, panic stricken. They were rallied, however, and led to final victory by the king, whose double for this time did not undo him."

The records of all these events may be found in the chronicles (in Latin) by Florentii Wigorniensis (Florence of Worcester) entitled "Chronicon ex Chronicis." The most accessible edition is that of Benjamin Thorpe, London, England, 1848. (Engl. Hist. Soc. Coll.) For the events referred to, see Vol. I, pages 1–3, 5, and 175.

DOMESDAY BOOK

The name Osmer appears in Domesday, the ancient book which contains the results of that great survey of England made by command of William the Conqueror for the purpose of ascertaining the resources of his newly conquered kingdom. The name is found both in the lists of those holding lands in the reign of Edward the Confessor and through later years anterior to the formation of the survey, and in the lists of Tenants in capite who held land immediately from the king, William I. For these items see "A General Introduction to Doomsday Book," by Sir Henry Ellis, F. R. S., Vol. I, page 461, Osmer, Somers 99, Osmer presbyter Nott. 280, Vol. II, p. 197, Osmar Leic. 237, Osmer Dev. 107b, 109, Chesh. 265, passim. 265, ter. 268b, Derb. 274. ARMS AND CREST

It has been claimed that there is a Hosmer (Osmer) coat of arms. In a letter written by Edward Sturges (2319) Hosmer to Henry Joseph Hosmer (1138) in 1891 he states that he has found the Hosmer arms, "Argent on a pale azure three wings conjoined or." In this letter he gives a sketch of this coat of arms and states that it is not to be found in Burke but that it is in some of the older books.

Hosmer (Osmer) Crest
(A buck's head cabossed proper)

Mr. Charles M. Hosmer (1549), who spent many years in England and made a careful study of such matters, stated that he obtained the information that the Kentish men did not surrender to William the Conqueror and that the Hosmers of Kent never received arms. There appears to be no sign of any in the better known books on English Heraldry. That mentioned above may perhaps belong to another Hosmer family.

There is, however, a Hosmer (Osmer) crest, described as follows: "Osmer, a buck's head cabossed proper." This may be found in James Fairbairn's "Book of Crests of the Families of Great Britain and Ireland," page 425 and plate 122, V. A copy of this crest is given on page 5. In Edward Sturges Hosmer's letter, already mentioned, he gives the same crest but also beneath it the inscription " pro patria ejusque libertate "

ANCESTRY OF JAMES HOSMER

The most remote Hosmer ancestor of whom we have actual records is James Hosmer* of Ticehurst, County of Sussex, England (see map, page 7). His wife was Agnes ——. James died in 1605; the administration was to his widow Agnes, in 1605, as shown by the probate records at Lewes, County of Sussex, Adm. Book B-3, page 53. His burial is not recorded at Ticehurst. His widow was buried at Ticehurst, Sept. 9, 1614.

James and Agnes Hosmer had three sons, all baptized at Ticehurst (Stephen, bapt. Dec. 26, 1570; Thomas, bapt. Nov. 2, 1572; James, bapt. Feb. 12, 1575/6); and two daughters (Martha, no record, and Anne, bapt. at Ticehurst in Oct. 1578). The old church at Ticehurst (mostly fourteenth century construction) in which the records are kept, is shown in the illustration (page 6).

Stephen Hosmer, bapt. at Ticehurst, Dec. 26, 1570, settled in the neighboring village of Hawkhurst after his marriage. He had nine children baptized at Hawkhurst: Thomas, bapt. Jan. 2, 1602/3; Stephen, bapt. Sept. 16, 1604; James (1), bapt. Dec. 8, 1605; William, bapt. Jan. 10, 1607/8; Mary, bapt. Dec. 10, 1609; Anne, bapt. Sept. 29, 1611; John, bapt. Apr. 30, 1615; John, bapt. Apr. 26, 1618; and Stephen, bapt. May 13, 1621.

The eldest son, Thomas, and the third son, James (1), were the founders of the Hosmer families in America.

THE MOTHER OF JAMES HOSMER

In looking up the parentage of James Hosmer (1) of Concord one is struck by the fact that although the name of the mother is printed in many places it is given in some as Katherine Iddenden and in others as Dorothy (last name unknown) and there are about as many records of the one as of the other. In most cases no authority is given for either statement. The question of her identity may have been settled in the minds of some who have investigated, but the answer is not to be found in print.

Savage, Genealogical Dictionary, gives Katherine as the mother of James. Hubbard, in his Genealogy of the Descendants of Josiah Hosmer, Jr., also gives Katherine. In the manuscript

* The name Hosmer (Osmer) is very ancient in the Counties of Sussex and Kent, and there are many records of this name. It is considered probable that the family could be traced back to 1300 if an exhaustive search were made.

written by George Lawrence Hosmer (1001) and supplemented by Abel Hosmer (1823) Katherine is given in one place and Dorothy in another. The Hosmer-Barney genealogy gives Dorothy. George W. Hosmer's manuscript gives Dorothy, doubtless obtained from James Bidwell Hosmer. In James B. Hosmer's genealogy is found the following:

1640 Feb.	5 Dorothy Hosmer

These records imply that Dorothy was the widow of Stephen, but they do not prove it.

In view of the many conflicting statements it seems worth while to go into the matter at some length. In 1925 Dr. G. E. Harmon* was in England and, at the request of the author, made an examination of the records at Hawkhurst. He found what appeared to be an explanation of the difficulty. In St. Laurence's Church he found two registers: first, the original, on paper, and nearly worn out; second, a copy, on parchment, made at a much later date because the original was apparently in danger of falling to pieces. In both books he found the baptismal, marriage and burial records quoted above. In the original book he found the following:

Married the sixth day of July James Hosmer and Katherine Iddenden 1601.

* Brother-in-law of the author.

In the copy he found the record:

> Married the sixth day of July Stephen Hosmer and Katherine Iddenden 1601.

These two records are contradictory. Either the copy is incorrect or else the clerk who made the copy attempted, in view of his personal knowledge, to correct a mistake in the original. Since, however, the copy was made a very long time after the original and when it became apparent that the old book would not endure much longer, it seemed highly improbable that this was an attempt by the clerk to correct an error in the original, but much more likely that it was a mistake, pure and simple, in transcribing the record from the paper book to the parchment book. If this surmise be correct, then Katherine Iddenden was the wife of James, not of Stephen. This mistake in copying accounts for so many persons' stating in good faith that Katherine Iddenden was the wife of Stephen and the mother of the James Hosmer (1) who was born in 1605.

This solution of the problem has since been fully verified by Mr. J. Gardner Bartlett of Boston, genealogist. While working in England on the genealogy of the Selden family he had occasion to copy these Hosmer records. The mother of James Hosmer (1) of Concord is proved by the records at Ticehurst and elsewhere to be Dorothy Selden.

Stephen Hosmer, son of James Hosmer, baptized Dec. 26, 1570, married at Ticehurst, Co. Sussex, Jan. 25, 1601/2, Dorothy Selline (= Selden).

She was born about 1582. She was aunt of the emigrant Thomas Selden of Hartford, Conn., who in his will in 1665 names his "cousin Thomas Hosmer of Hartford." Mr. Bartlett has furnished the following evidence to show the correctness of the solution given above.

1. After 1560, each parish had to send each year to the archdeacon's office a copy (or transcript) of its register for the preceding year. For eastern Kent these "transcripts" are still preserved at Canterbury. The transcript for Hawkhurst in 1601 gives the marriage on July 13,* 1601, of James Hosmer and Katherine Iddenden, thus agreeing with the original paper book at Hawkhurst (i.e. Married the 13th day of July 1601 James Hosmer and Katherine Iddenden).
2. The registers of Ticehurst in Sussex show that Stephen Hosmer married there on Jan. 25, 1601/2, Dorothy Sellin (= Selden).
3. The will of Stephen Hosmer of Hawkhurst in 1632 names his wife as Dorothy.

* There is a difference in the day of the month in these two reports, which may be owing to difficulty in deciphering the records; but it does not in any way affect the conclusion.

The records copied by Dr. Harmon are given below:

Baptized the first day of June John the son of James Hosmer 1602 (Both records)

CHART SHOWING THE CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN OF JAMES AND AGNES HOSMER OF TICEHURST

Having shown who were the immediate ancestors of James, and having pointed out the places where the Hosmer family lived in England, we will now consider some of the circumstances which led to the emigration of James and his brother to America.

AMERICAN EXPLORATIONS OF WILLIAM WOOD OF KENT

About 1629 a man from Kent named William Wood landed on the Massachusetts shore near Beverly. He was sent out to study and report on the resources of the new colony. He went up the coast to the Merrimack River, and thence in a small boat up the river to what is now Lowell. It is probable that he went also into the Concord River. He remained in the colony for some time and made a careful study of the Indians, the topography of the country, and its resources. Upon his return to England he published (1634) a book entitled "New England's Prospect." In it he describes the country in a most interesting manner and with great accuracy and detail. With this book he published the first map of the Massachusetts Bay (see American edition by Eben Moody Boynton, 1898). Those who are interested to read a quaint book of the Seventeenth Century will find this one well worth reading. This publication was doubtless a factor in inducing the Kentish men to emigrate to America. It will be observed that many of the first settlers in the town of Concord came from Kent.

CONDITIONS IN ENGLAND

During the decade from 1630 to 1640, in the reign of Charles I, a large number of persons emigrated from England to America, and during this period a great many of the towns along the New England shore were settled. This emigration movement was caused by, or at least greatly favored by, the religious and political struggles going on in England between the Puritans and the Royalists. Charles, by his broken promises and by his unwise acts, eventually aroused the antagonism of all parties. At this time he bitterly opposed the Puritans, attempted to force them to conform to the ritual prescribed by the prayer book, and offended them by compelling their clergymen to read the Declaration of Sports. The outlook for religious freedom in England was discouraging. Prospects looked brighter in America, and large numbers of Puritans came here at this time seeking what they failed to find in the mother country.

During the early part of his reign Charles I was engaged in various foreign wars. By his utter disregard of the rights of his subjects, and by poor management generally, he antagonized the Parliament as well as many of his people. For the rest of his life he and the Parliament were continually at odds. By 1639 he had open rebellion to deal with, and from that time on until he was beheaded in 1649 there was almost continuous civil war. Owing to his quarrels with the Parliament the latter was slow to grant him the special appropriations of which he was in great need for the prosecution of his wars. He did, however, raise considerable sums by means of the subsidies. These were taxes which were permitted for this purpose and which were levied chiefly on landholders and persons of wealth. In order to obtain permission to leave England one had to show not only that he was conformable to the Church of England but also that he was not subject to this tax, as will be seen in the record of James Hosmer's sailing from London (page 14).

THE EMIGRATION

The Hosmers who emigrated from England to America, in the reign of Charles the First, came from the village of Hawkhurst in the County of Kent. They were sons of Stephen Hosmer of that village, who was the son of James Hosmer of Ticehurst, County of Sussex. The record of this family is contained in the old parish registers in St. Laurence's Church at Hawkhurst. We have found no record of any other Hosmers coming to America.

Members of the American family of Hosmers who have visited Hawkhurst (and there have been many) have been surprised to find no Hosmers living in the place, not even any grave records, but merely the church records of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. There are, however, families of Hosmers now living at Headcorn, Cranbrook, and other places near by (see map, page 7). The name is a very old one in Kent and Sussex counties; the large number of records of this name indicate that formerly there must have been many Hosmers scattered through this region.

The two Hosmers who are definitely known to have come to America from Hawkhurst are Thomas Hosmer, son of Stephen, who was born in Hawkhurst in 1603 and who was in Cambridge, Mass., in 1632, and James (1), his younger brother, born in 1605, the record of whose leaving London is given on page 14.

A certain John Hosmer signed a petition for the town of Chelmsford in 1653. One story is that this John was the youngest son of Stephen, that he came to America, went away soon after, and, it is said, died in Ireland. So far as is known he left no descendants in this country. Shattuck, "History of Concord," says that this

John was a son of the James Hosmer (1) who was born in 1605. Savage, Geneal. Dict., vol. 2, page 466, says that John was born in 1639 and was a son of James Hosmer (1) of Concord; but we have a record that Mary was born in 1639, and if this John was born in 1639, or in fact at any time after James Hosmer (1) left England, he was too young to sign the petition. John the youngest son of Stephen was married and living at Hawkhurst, and died there in 1644, as shown by his will. These facts seem to eliminate both the son (if there was one) and the younger brother of James Hosmer (1). This man who signed the petition may possibly have been John the son of James and Katherine (Iddenden) Hosmer, born in 1602, and cousin of James Hosmer (1). We shall have to leave this for more expert genealogists to decide.

The exact date on which Thomas Hosmer left England we do not know. We find him in Cambridge (then called Newtowne), Massachusetts, in 1632. He was freeman May 6, 1635. The Cambridge records show that he resided in 1635 on the south side of Brattle St.; and in 1642 owned land on the south side of Winthrop Street between Brighton and Spring Streets. He was Selectman of the town. He left Cambridge about 1636 and went to Hartford, Connecticut, probably with Rev. Thomas Hooker, and became one of the founders of Hartford. His daughter Hannah married Josiah Willard, March 20, 1656. The record is found in the Concord Records, probably the only instance of one of the descendants of Thomas being recorded in that town.

Of James Hosmer's leaving England we have a definite record. The following is from "The Original Lists of Persons of Quality; emigrants &c., &c., who went from Great Britain to the American Plantation. 1600–1700," by John Camden Hotten, New York, 1874 (pages 53–4).

James Hosmer went first to Cambridge, Massachusetts, where his elder brother had preceded him. Thomas was prominent in Cambridge affairs and doubtless assisted his younger brother in establishing himself in the new colony. While here James was granted two acres of land* (said to be near the site of Harvard College) " provided that he buy a house in the town or else return again to the town." From the wording of this town record it is apparent that from the very first he was considering the question of going to Concord, as he seems not to have settled in Cambridge for any length of time. It is probable that the wife and children who came with him died the first winter. It is also not improbable that his son James (6) was born here at Cambridge about 1637. James (1) was recorded as freeman May 17, 1637.

THE CONCORD SETTLEMENT

James soon disposed of his land† in Cambridge and joined the company that journeyed under the leadership of Simon Willard and Peter Bulkeley fifteen miles through the woods to the meadows of the Concord River. It was a long, hard journey in those days. Here on the site of the old Indian town of Musketaquid was established the new town of Concord, the first settlement above tidewaters. The charter was granted by the General Court September 2, 1635. The town was to be six miles square and to be called Concord. All sides of this town were bounded by Indian lands. The title to the land on which Concord itself was located was acquired by purchase from the Indians (as was the custom in the colony during this period), and payment was made August 5, 1637. The original deed seems to have been lost, but Shattuck, in his " History of Concord," gives the sworn testimony of those who witnessed or who knew about the purchase.

James Hosmer was among the sixty-three settlers who were granted land in the new settlement. He received four lots containing one hundred and sixty-four acres in the " South Quarter " of the town. In 1666 his tax is given as £1–8–7 (Shattuck, " History of Concord," page 38).

JAMES HOSMER'S FAMILY

The records concerning the wives of James Hosmer are very meagre. In order to show what is actually known it is well at this point to quote from the early Boston records and the Middlesex County records.

* " Jan. 4th 1635/6
It is further ordered that James Hosmer shall have two acres there, — that is by the pine swamp, provided that he buy a house in the town or else return to the town," — Cambridge Town Records.

The County Records

[1] "She has been called Alice in the record before. Possibly the name was returned to the town clerk as Ellice, and carelessly transformed by him into its present shape." (Note in Concord Records.)

(Both of the above sets of records are printed in "Births Marriages and Deaths, Concord, Mass., 1635–1850.")

From these records it is inferred that James's first wife Ann† and his two young daughters, Marie and Ann, died, probably the first winter, as no more is heard of them. James married as his second wife Mary ———, probably in Cambridge. Their children were James and Mary. The wife Mary died in 1641, and he married as his third wife Alice ———, (in one instance referred to in the records as Elinne). Their children were Stephen, Hannah, and Mary.

THE HOSMER HOME IN CONCORD

Little is known about the first home of James Hosmer the emigrant. It is shrouded in the mystery that surrounds most of the log cabins built by the first settlers. They were too busy clearing land and getting the simplest necessities of life to make

* It should be remembered that previous to 1752 the year began on March 25. When the dates were indicated by numbers, as above, the whole of March was counted as the first month, April the second, and so on, although the ecclesiastical year was considered to begin on March 25. Thus 2 Mar. 1639 (i.e. 1639/40) would be 2 (1) 1640; and 26 Mar. 1640 would be 26 (1) 1640. As a further illustration, in the public records a child is recorded as born 14 Mar. 1656 (1656/7) thus recognizing Mar. 25 as the beginning of the year. In the church records he is recorded as baptized "15 day of 1 mo. 1657 (1656/7)," which is the same as considering the year to begin Mar. 1.

The calendar was changed from the Julian to the Gregorian by act of Parliament in 1751. The day following Sept. 2, 1752, was to be called Sept. 14, 1752, and thereafter the year was to begin on Jan. 1. The 11 days added was the accumulated difference between the two calendars. To avoid misunderstandings the year numbers during this period are often written double for such dates as occur in Jan., Feb., and Mar. For example, Feb. 10, 1642/3 indicates that according to "old style" (O.S.) February would fall near the close of the year 1642; but according to "new style" (N.S.) it would occur near the beginning of the year 1643. Discrepancies of a year, and discrepancies of 11 days are often due to mistakes in noting this change.

To change O.S. to N.S. the first month must be called the third, and 10 days must be added to all dates between 1582 and 1699 inclusive, and 11 days must be added to dates between 1700 and 1752. 20.10.1655 or 20^{o} (10^{o}) 1655 means the twentieth day of the tenth month, or Dec. 30, 1655. (N.S.)

All dates given in this book are just as they stand in the source from which they were taken.

† Said to have been a relative of Simon Willard.

many records for the benefit of future historians. There is a tradition that James's first home in Concord was on the West Street " not far from the house of Mrs. Damon," and also that he gave the land for the burial place on the West Street. Later he removed to his farm on the intervale about a mile and a half west of the town on the west bank of the north branch of the Concord River (the Assabet River). This farm extended from the stone road at Darby's Bridge, as it now is, northward to the site of the Groton Road. There is nothing left of the original house; it is said that the cellar hole can still be recognized.

This location has a fine open view to the westward over the intervale, river, and hill beyond. It was of this place that Henry Thoreau used to say, " I must walk to Abel Hosmer's to see the sunset " (G. W. Hosmer's manuscript).

James Hosmer's life on his farm was apparently a quiet one. According to Shattuck's " History of Concord " the only public office held by him was that of one of the four overseers for the " South Quarter," who had charge of the maintenance of highways and bridges in that quarter.

When his eldest son James (6) was married, another house was built on the same farm about a quarter of a mile away, very near the Fitchburg Railroad bridge over the north branch of the river. Later the farm was divided between James (6) and Stephen (9), the latter owning the part on which stood the old house. All the (Hosmer) children of the third generation were born in these same two houses. Both of these farms remained in the Hosmer family for many years. The southern portion belonged to descendants of James (6) until about 1870, when Joseph Hosmer (653) sold it. The northern portion was owned by Abel (521) in 1882. His son Prescott carried on the farm for some years but later sold it, and thus the entire farm passed out of the family.

THE INDIAN FIGHTS

James (6) married Sara White, who was sister of Mrs. Mary Rowland of Lancaster. There is a tradition that during the Indian wars Mrs. Rowland and her young son (some say her family and her neighbors) were captured and carried off by the Indians to New Hampshire. She awoke in the night, killed several of the Indians, and with her son made her escape and walked back to Lancaster. Finding Lancaster burned and her people gone, she went to Concord and remained there. She afterward wrote a pamphlet describing her experiences.

In 1676 the Indians had destroyed most of the small outlying towns and had determined to wipe out the entire white settlement. They held council at Marlboro' (or Stow?) whether to attack

Concord or Sudbury. The young men wished to attack Concord, as there was more plunder and more scalps, but an old chief warned them that they would be beaten there, and convinced them that they should attack Sudbury. A company of soldiers from Watertown, aided by several citizens of Sudbury, had attacked the Indians but were obliged to retreat. Several Concord men at once came to their aid. Arriving near the garrison house of Walter Haynes, they were decoyed into an ambush and several were killed. James Hosmer (6) was among this number. He staid in the fight as long as possible. When it was evident that the fight was lost he fled, but was shot while swimming across the river. On the stone post placed at the scene of the fight his name heads the list of those who lost their lives.

Below is a facsimile of the signature of James Hosmer, Sr., photographed (by permission) from the inventory of the estate of his son James Hosmer, Jr., who was killed in the Sudbury Fight, King Philip's War, in 1676. This document is on record at the Registry of Probate at East Cambridge, Massachusetts. It is entitled "An jnventary of the Estate of james Hosmor (junier) of Concord in Middlesex, deceased, being slaine in the jniagement with the jndeans at Sudsburie, one the 21 of the second month in the yeare 1676." The entire document appears to be in the handwriting of James Hosmer, Sr.* It is signed by him and also by Henry Woodis, John Scotchford, and Thomas Wheeler.

The younger son, Stephen (9), married Abigail Wood, the daughter of John Wood, and had eight children. The branch of the Hosmer family descended from Stephen is much more numerous than that descended from his elder brother James. Of Stephen himself we have but little record, but we know that he saw service in King Philip's War (Bodge, "Soldiers in King Philip's War)." His name is also mentioned in Shattuck's History in connection with military services during The Indian Wars.

THE EXODUS

For the first hundred years after the settlement of the town nearly all the Hosmers remained in Concord itself or in adjoining towns which were once a part of Concord. Thus far it was liter-

* It has been stated by more than one person that James (1) was a college man and that he graduated from Cambridge University. Letters from the registries of both Cambridge and Oxford universities state that his name is not found on the records of matriculations and degrees. James was a clothier, his father was a shearman, and his brother was a clothworker. These people occupied humble stations in life, and college educations could hardly have been the rule among them.

ally the "Concord Family." James (13), born in 1660, went early to Marlboro'. Later he went to Woodstock, Connecticut. His sister Sarah (14) married in Marlboro'. With these exceptions there seems to have been little or no emigration before 1700, but early in the eighteenth century many Hosmers went to Mason and New Ipswich in New Hampshire, to Sterling, Boylston, and Templeton in Massachusetts, and thence to Vermont, northern New Hampshire, and Maine. At least one branch went to Canada. Later on they scattered all over the Union, so that there is scarcely a state that is not represented. Two branches are known to have been in Canada and some have lived, temporarily at least, in Mexico.

CONCLUSION

In concluding this brief sketch of the history of the Hosmers we wish to say that we have endeavored to stick to the truth and to follow wherever it might lead. We may have destroyed a few illusions, such as coats of arms and rich heiresses, but we hope that we have not obscured any facts. We come not of noble family or landed gentry but from good solid Kentish yeomen, the kind that has furnished much of the old stock of which this new country was made, — men of whom we need not be ashamed.

According to the records the Hosmers have done their fair share in the way of military service in all the wars of the Colonies and the Union, and several have won distinction. The family record is one of which we may reasonably be proud. All families have their defects, if the truth were known. The record of the Hosmers will bear comparison with that of any other family.

We hope that what has been written may arouse an interest in further study of the family history, and especially that our calling attention to the fine opportunity for genealogical research in England may bear fruit.

Following are the records of families, beginning with James Hosmer (1) the emigrant. So far as possible these have been taken from official records, but a great many were necessarily obtained by correspondence and from miscellaneous sources. In point of reliability, therefore, they range from the most accurate possible down to mere surmises. Wherever practicable the sources of information have been indicated.

FIRST AND SECOND GENERATIONS

James Hosmer (1) son of Stephen and Dorothy (Selden) Hosmer, was baptized in Hawkhurst, Kent, England, Dec. 6, 1605. He sailed from London, Apr. 9, 1635, with his wife Ann (2), two daughters, Marie (3) and Ann (4), and two maidservants. He landed at Cambridge (Newtowne), Mass. His wife and two children probably died the first winter. Soon after he went to Concord, Mass., took up land, and remained in Concord the rest of his life. The next two children, James (6) and Mary (7) were children of James and his wife Mary (5). Mary, the wife, was buried 11^{0} (3^{0}) 1641. The other three children, Stephen (9), Hannah (10), and Mary (11) are recorded as children of James and Alice (8). Alice died Mar. 3, 1664/5. James (1) died in Concord, Feb. 7, 1685.

Prudence Hosmer was a woman of strong character; she had a taste for literature, and read a great many books. She was especially fond of poetry. She is said to have had a remarkable command of language. Doubtless the eloquence for which Joseph Hosmer was distinguished was in part due to the training he received from his mother, Prudence Hosmer.

HON. JOSEPH HOSMER

Hon. Joseph Hosmer (162), son of Thomas and Prudence (Hosmer) Hosmer, was born in Concord, Mass., Dec. 27, 1735. His education was exceptional, in that his mother, who had a taste for literature, especially poetry, and was well read, was able to give him a far better training than was usual at that time. His command of language, for which he was afterward noted, was no doubt partly due to his mother's training. Early in life he began to take an active part in public affairs. During the discussions of the first Provincial Convention which preceded the outbreak of hostilities in 1775 one of the townsmen (Rev. Mr. Bliss, a Tory) made a powerful speech, in which he ridiculed the doings of the "Sons of Liberty," and urged people to stand loyally by the king. Mr. Hosmer, then little known, immediately replied in simple but energetic and eloquent language which at once introduced him to public favor. In a masterly speech he confuted all that Mr. Bliss had said and as a result of this speech the tide of public opinion was turned.

Joseph Hosmer was captain of a Concord company previous to the outbreak of the Revolution. On the 19th of April he got word long before daylight that the British were on their way to Concord, and he hastened to the village. Colonel James Barrett, an old man, and quite infirm, had recently been appointed as commanding officer of the Colonial troops. In this emergency he named Joseph Hosmer as adjutant to assist him in forming the troops to resist the attack.* He, as assistant to Colonel Barrett, asked Major Buttrick and Colonel Robinson of Westford to lead the column. While the officers were consulting with some of the older Concord men Hosmer noticed a great volume of smoke rising from the town where the British were burning stores. He went to the officers and asked, "Will you let them burn the town down?" Upon this the council immediately decided to attack, and the battle at the North Bridge began. Captain Hosmer and his brother Benjamin went to Cambridge that day, as did so many others in pursuit of the retreating British.

During the remainder of the war Mr. Hosmer (who later had the grade of major) was active in keeping the commissary department supplied. He was superintendent for Middlesex County, and in the records of the Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors in the Revolutionary War his name will be found in many places.

Later, when the new government was formed, he was in the House of Representatives for five years and in the Senate of the State for nine years. He was for many years chairman of the committee of ways and means in the House and in the Senate.

The last public office which he held was that of High Sheriff of Middlesex County (1792), which he held for about fourteen years. (Shattuck says 1794–1808.) At that time this office was considered more honorable than it was in later years.

Major Hosmer's record stands out as one of the most brilliant of the family. His strong character and active mind mark him as one of the distinguished men of his generation. In the Concord Public Library is a portrait of Major Joseph Hosmer, probably the only picture in existence of one of those who fought at the Bridge.

LIEUTENANT SAMUEL HOSMER

Samuel Hosmer (168), son of James (67) and Elizabeth (Davis) (167) Hosmer, was born in Concord, Mass., May 12, 1734. He married June 5, 1755, Ann Parlin* of Carlisle. They lived on a farm at Nine-Acre Corner, close to the Sudbury line. During the Revolution Samuel was for a while second-lieutenant in Capt. Joseph Hosmer's (Concord) Company (Shattuck, page 353). Samuel Hosmer (639) left a paper in his bible in which he states that his grandfather Samuel (168) was at one time a Lieutenant in King George's troops (probably during the French War). He also says that he was in the Concord Fight, at the Bridge, and followed the British in the retreat through Lexington to Boston. Certain incidents are related in this connection, also some accounts of his wonderful marksmanship.

There are four military services credited to Samuel Hosmer in the Revolution, and it is not easy to determine to which man some of them belong. The only other Samuels were (252) and (338), the former being 14 years of age and the latter 13 at the outbreak of hostilities. The earlier services must have been those of Samuel (168) while it is entirely probable that some of the later ones belong to Samuel (252). Mr. G. A. Gardner (1977) states that Samuel (252) was a soldier in the Revolution.

Some writers have stated that Samuel (168) at one time lived in Boscawen, N. H.; but he is said, by his grandson, to have lived all his life on his farm at Nine-Acre Corner. He died there Jan. 22, 1796.

HARRIET GOODHUE HOSMER

Harriet Goodhue Hosmer (902), daughter of Dr. Hiram and Sarah (Grant) Hosmer, was born Oct. 9, 1830, at Watertown, Mass. Dr. Hosmer had lost his wife and one child by consumption and made the care of this girl's health the first consideration. He encouraged her to engage in outdoor sports then considered to be those of a boy. She was naturally high spirited and independent, and for a time was the despair of all her teachers, who had no control over her. At sixteen she entered Mrs. Sedgwick's school at Lenox, where she remained for three years. Here for the first time her wild and impulsive nature was restrained and her energies wisely directed. When she returned to Watertown she had determined to make sculpture her life work. Although now imbued with a serious purpose she always remained a fearless and high-spirited woman, and her eccentric ways continually excited the wonder of the Roman people, among whom she lived for so many years.

She studied sculpture for a time in Boston with Mr. Stephenson. In the meantime she studied anatomy with her father. Realizing the great importance to her of the study of anatomy she attended the medical school at St. Louis to perfect herself in this subject. After returning to Watertown she worked in her studio which her father had built for her and here produced a copy of Canova's Napoleon and several other works. She then determined to go to Rome. In spite of many difficulties she carried out this plan in 1852. In Rome she was fortunate enough to be admitted as a pupil of the English sculptor John Gibson.

While studying with Gibson she modelled a bust of Daphne and one of Medusa (1853). In 1852 she finished a full length statue of Œnone. This gave such satisfaction that she received an order for a similar work for the Mercantile Library in St. Louis. This commission was filled two years later by a life-size statue of Beatrice Cenci. She next (1855) designed Puck, a humorous figure, based on Shakespeare's description. After that date she produced a large number of works, Will-o'-the-wisp, Zenobia, statue of Col. Thomas H. Benton at St. Louis, Sleeping Faun, Waking Faun, and a monument to Abraham Lincoln. For the Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893, she designed a statue of the Queen of Naples as the heroine of Gaeta, and one of the Queen of Spain.

While in Rome she was associated with Hawthorne, Thorwaldson, Flaxman, Thackeray, George Eliot, and George Sand, and was frequently the guest of the Brownings in Florence. Miss Hosmer's studio was said to have been the most beautiful in Rome. She held a leading position in the art society there. Harriet Hosmer won for herself a high place among the sculptors of the world and her name is known everywhere. She continued to live in Rome until a few years before her death. She died in Watertown, Mass., Feb. 21, 1908.
